NUS opens new lab in Hollywood to focus on R&D collaborations

By Adelyn Lim, Channel NewsAsia | Posted: 25 July 2006 2358 hrs

SINGAPORE : The National University of Singapore has opened a new NUS Hollywood Lab in Los Angeles, California.

The lab will focus on international R&D collaborations, student exchange, visiting professor programmes and joint business ventures between Singapore and US.

According to its founding director Mr Newton Lee, the goal of the new lab is to bring together the best minds and combine resources from the academia and entertainment industry.

The lab plans to work closely with major Hollywood movie studios, universities and entertainment companies in the US.

Mr Lee is the creator of various technologies which include best selling interactive CD-ROM titles.
